ASTONISHING CURES,

EFFECTED BY

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS AND OINTMENT,

ARE NOW OCCURRING IN NEW SOUTH WALES

CURE OF SCROFULA.

January 1, 1849.

THIS is to certify, that my daughter, Matilda Alcorn, aged 7 years, has been afflicted for the last three years with Scrofula, and after having been attended by several respectable practitioners, without success, I was induced to try Holloway's Medicines, which, after a continuance of about three months, completely restored her to health. This can be verified by numerous persons in this vicinity, where I have been residing for the last twenty-two years.

R. ALCORN,
Jerry's Plains.

Mr. Pinhey, Chemist, West Maitland.

RECENT CURE OF DISEASED LIVER.

To Mr. J. K. HEYDON,

SIR,—About eighteen months since, I was dangerously attacked with a liver complaint, for which I consulted the two medical men of the district but derived no benefit from either of them; in fact I was so bad, that one of them told me "he could see no hopes of my recovery," and gave me up. I was afterwards advised to try Holloway's Pills and Ointment, which I did, and after the continued use of them for seven weeks, (according to the directions accompanying the medicines,) I am now entirely cured; and for the benefit of those that may be similarly affected I have great pleasure in giving it publicity.—I am, Sir, your obedient servant.

WILLIAM RODGERS.
Ravensworth, Hunter's River,
January 17, 1849.

CURE OF THIRTY-FIVE ULCERS.

Molong, September 21, 1848.

To Mr. J. K. HEYDON,

SIR,—I owe a debt of gratitude to Professor Holloway, for my almost miraculous cure, after seven years of suffering, caused by exposure to wet and cold, and the undue use of mercurial medicines. When I first commenced to use the Pills and Ointment, I had thirty-five ulcers on my body, and a constant head-ache, and pains all over me. My throat had got so affected that I was obliged at last to live entirely on gruel. Having spent upwards of two hundred pounds in medicines and medical advice to no purpose, except that of making me worse, I tried Holloway's Pills and Ointment, by means of which and the blessing of God, I am now in the enjoyment of excellent health. My feeling for others similarly circumstanced, as well as my gratitude to Mr. Holloway, compel me to send this communication.—I am, sir, your obedient servant,

JEREMIAH REED.

P.S.—I am at present in the employment of Messrs. Syers, Brothers, Meadows, near Wellington.

ANOTHER CASE OF LIVER COMPLAINT.

Campbelltown, April 11, 1848.

To Mr. J. K. HEYDON,

SIR,—I feel it a duty incumbent on me to let the public at large know the wonderful cure that has been performed on me by the effects of Holloway's Medicine. I have for the last six months been afflicted with the liver complaint, and was at last compelled to take to my bed in a very low state, so bad that I did not think I would ever rise in health again. After trying medical aid and finding no relief, I was advised by Mr. William Bursill to try the medicine aforenamed, which I did, and after one or two doses of Holloway's Pills, and rubbing in the Ointment, I found great relief, and by strictly following the rules laid down by Mr. Holloway, and using his Pills and Ointment for six weeks, I find myself in the enjoyment of as good health as I ever possessed in my life. The truth of this statement is incontestible, as there is not one of my neighbours but could testify the same.

I remain, &c.,
ROBERT ELKINS,
Blacksmith.

These truly invaluable Pills can be obtained at the Establishment of Professor Holloway, near Temple Bar, London; and of CHRISTMAS COMES BUT ONCE A YEAR !!!

J. F. READ respectfully begs leave to bring before the notice of the gentry of Sydney and the surrounding districts, his old establishment, well known as the Hyde Park Toy and Fancy Bazaar. He is the more induced to do so on account of the several demands made upon him by such as are anxious not to forget altogether the old and revered custom of bestowing gifts upon their young friends and acquaintances at this particular season of the year, which is usually devoted to sport and pastime, and therefore has subjoined a list of some of those articles which may be considered appropriate for presents, the whole of which have been marked at such reduced prices as shall defy competition.

J. F. R. having lately received an extensive assortment of bijouterie, toys, fancy work, &c., &c., of the newest and most fashionable designs, is confident that a visit to his repository will fully repay those ladies and gentlemen who shall honour him with a call, the trouble thereof.

N.B.—Orders punctually and carefully attended to.

FOR OTAGO.—By the Scotia, this evening, at six.

FOR SAN FRANCISCO, CALIFORNIA.—By the Sabine, to-morrow evening, at six.

FOR HOBART TOWN.—By the Emma, on Saturday next, at six, P.M.

FOR PORT PHILLIP AND LAUNCESTON.—By the steamer Shamrock, on Saturday, at 6 P.M.

THE LORD HOBART.—The Lord Hobart is about to proceed on the voyage to California, under the command of Captain George Banks, well known in the whaling and sandal-wood trades out of this port.

The Shamrock has encountered a succession of gales since leaving Launceston; on her passage thence to Port Phillip she had to seek shelter at Circular Head, where she remained three days. Since leaving Port Phillip, she has been compelled to bring to under Wilson's Promontory for twenty four hours from strong easterly winds. The brig Christina cleared Port Phillip Heads on Wednesday last, and the Dart on Friday evening, both for Sydney. [illegible] bourne, was lying wind-bound in Twofold Bay when the Shamrock left there. The yacht Wanderer had not then made her appearance at that place.

Captain Robinson, of the Pride, whaler, lying at Recherche Bay, met with the American whaler, Planter, the captain of which stated that two men, supposed to be natives of Sydney, he having engaged them at that port, upon being out to sea, showed strong indications of a mutinous disposition, and on the last occasion demanded some of the cabin biscuit, which having been refused, they broke open the hold. He (the captain) ordered them to desist or he would fire at them. One of the men was in the act of hoisting a basket of bread to his companion, when the captain, having a revolving pistol in his hand, shot the one in the hold, who immediately expired; upon turning round, the other man (who was just upon the eve of striking him with a whale spear) received the contents of another barrel which carried away the fingers of the right hand, and otherwise wounded him, but not mortally; there were several other men, each armed with spears, spades, harpoons, and tomahawks, who upon seeing their companions fall, retired, and have since shown not the slightest inclination to mutiny. The captain further states, that he took a rope, made a running noose, twisted it round his wrist, hauled up the body, pitched it overboard, and that in a few minutes nothing could have been told of the late fracas, except that he had lost one hand, and the other man he had shot had lost another.—Hobart Town Paper.

WATER POLICE OFFICE.—The seamen of the Petrel, who have been in custody for several days on a charge of conspiring together and refusing to work, were yesterday brought up, when the captain stated that he had received a letter from them expressing regret for what they had done, and their willingness and desire to return to work. Captain Brown said, that with the evidence before him, he must commit the prisoners to take their trials, but at the same time he was authorised to state, that if the prisoners went quietly to work, and continued at their duty, the Attorney-General would not put them on their trial. They were then committed for trial, but their own recognizances for their appearance were taken. They all went on board and "turned to."

THE STEAMER SHAMROCK.—The Shamrock having discharged the whole of her inward cargo yesterday, hauled to the Company's establishment at Pyrmont, to take in fuel for her next trip. She leaves for Port Phillip and Launceston on Saturday next, positively, at five P.M.

The brig Peri, from Sydney, 31st ultimo, arrived at Launceston the 14th instant, at which place she was sold for £2000. The brig William, hence the 6th instant, arrived there on the 15th, and was laid on again for Sydney.

The schooner Lillias left Geelong for Launceston on the 17th instant, with 250 sheep on board.

"Sworn to no Master, of no Sect am I."

THE BRISBANE CIRCUIT.

THE extension of the administration of Justice to the northern districts by the recent proclamation of the establishment of Circuit Courts at Brisbane, must prove of great advantage to the district of Moreton Bay. This important question occupied the attention of the Law Commissioners, and on referring to their report, we find that "The majority are of opinion that an addition to the Supreme Court has become necessary, in order to provide for the due administration of Justice in the district of Moreton Bay; if for no other reason. Not only is the consideration of the enormous expense sustained in bringing prisoners and witnesses a long voyage to Sydney, as at present, pressed upon our attention; but it is credibly maintained that a large amount of crime passes wholly unpunished, and is increasing in consequence of the almost helpless difficulties (the intolerable inconvenience to parties of having to leave their homes being taken into account) in the way of Justice."

The report then proceeded to state, "After full consideration, a majority of us have arrived at the conclusion that the best means of providing against these evils will be the appointment of a fourth Judge; and that either such Judge, or the four Judges in rotation, as may be arranged, should hold a Circuit Court twice a year at (in the first instance) Brisbane, with the prospect of adding in the course of a few years, if circumstances so require, a further Circuit Court at some other town of the Northern District, more in the interior."

No one will dispute the proposition, that as the colony increases, as new districts are opened, and towns formed, the inhabitants should receive an equivalent for their contribution to the general revenue, and that instead of being put to the expense of seeking justice at a distance, justice should be administered, if possible, in the districts in which they reside. The unfortunate report from which we have quoted, became a dead letter, from the Law Commissioners having taken upon themselves to do that which formed no part of their duty, viz., the recommendation of compensation to those officers who probably might be thrown out of employment in the event of the report being adopted. This error was fatal to its reception. But from the report, the proposal for circuits at Brisbane has emanated. In adopting the suggestion, the Government have acted wisely; in trying the experiment without increasing the number of Judges, they have acted with prudence and economy. The absence of a Circuit Court in the district of Moreton Bay, where an extensive and wealthy population are settled, has been a serious drawback to its advancement. Litigation has been almost limited to the £10 jurisdiction of the Small Debts Court, and the trial of offenders to the Summary Jurisdiction of the Justices at Petty Sessions. Occasionally, we will admit, cases have been sent to the Quarter Sessions and Criminal Sittings at Sydney, but such cases are few in comparison with the crime that must exist and remain unpunished. We cannot suppose that there is less crime in the district of Moreton Bay than in any other part of the colony. The population is composed of the same elements, with this exception, that that district has recently received a larger addition in proportion to its numbers, of the penal population thrust upon us from England, than any of the other districts. With these reinforcements, crime will not diminish—the probabilities are that it will increase.

What then has been the state of things at Moreton Bay hitherto? If a prosecutor preferred a charge of larceny which ended in a committal, he was bound over to appear as a witness in Sydney.

The Law Commissioners were made aware of the fact of the enormous expense sustained in the transit of prisoners and witnesses, and it must be remembered that the allowances rarely cover the expenses the latter are put to in doing their duty to the State, by bringing offenders to Justice.

The inadequate remuneration to witnesses is only one of the inconveniences which has deterred prosecutors from exposing crime; a still more serious cause has been the distance they have had to travel, and the time lost in coming to Sydney. What settler on the Fitz Roy Downs would leave his flocks, merely to prosecute a simple case of larceny at Darlinghurst? Rather would he put up with his loss and allow the delinquent to go unpunished than submit to the inconvenience of a long voyage, and a still longer detention in Sydney. Another advantage which we observe from the proclamation is, that Circuits are to be held biennially at Brisbane, in the months of May and November, without any increase in our Judicial machinery. When the Law Commissioners made their report, a fourth Judge was deemed indispensable for the performance of this additional duty—an extension of some of the other circuits was proposed, but the recommendation of the appointment of a fourth Judge mainly rested upon the reasons urged in favour of Circuits at Brisbane. It is, however, now discovered that with a little paring down and alteration of the present periods in which the Terms, Trials of Causes, and Equity Appeals are held, sufficient time will be allotted for the Brisbane Circuit with the appliances which we at present possess, and without entailing upon the colony the additional charge of the salary of a fourth Judge.

In the few committals from the northern district, it not unfrequently happens that cases are postponed, and prisoners get discharged, from the inability of witnesses to attend, or from the want of interpreters. It was only at the last criminal sittings at Darlinghurst, that the trial of some blacks, committed from Grafton, (one of whom was charged with murder) was postponed, because the committing Justices had omitted to send down an interpreter, and no one in Sydney was capable of undertaking that duty; and if at the ensuing sittings their trials should be postponed for the same or any other cause, these prisoners according to the practice of the Court, will be entitled to be discharged on their own recognizances. The prisoners committed from Grafton will hereafter be tried at Brisbane, and if the absence of an interpreter be discovered at the beginning of an Assize, it is more than probable that one might be obtained in the district before the Assize would be concluded.

VAGRANCY ACT.

13 VICTORIÆ, No. XLVI.

AN ACT for the more effectual Prevention of Vagrancy, and for the Punishment of Idle and Disorderly Persons, Rogues and Vagabonds, and incorrigible Rogues, in the colony of New South Wales.

CLAUSE 1. Repeals 6 Wm. IV. No. 6.

2. Persons convicted in this colony of any capital or transportable offence, and persons transported to or convicted in any British colony or possession in the southern hemisphere, and coming to this colony, to register their places of residence with Justices of Petty Sessions.

3. Persons not complying with the foregoing provision, not appearing when summoned to give an account of their means of support, or shall not be able to give a satisfactory account of themselves, who shall be found lodging or wandering in the company of aboriginal natives,—common prostitutes wandering in any street or highway, or behaving in a riotous or indecent manner,—habitual drunkards, having been thrice convicted thereof within the preceding twelve months, behaving in a riotous or indecent manner—the holder of any house which shall be frequented by reputed thieves, and every person there found in company with such reputed thieves—every person wandering abroad in any public place to beg or gather alms, or carrying children to do so—shall be deemed idle and disorderly persons, whom it shall be lawful for any justice to send to gaol, there to be kept to hard labour for any time not exceeding two years.

4. Oral proof to be sufficient.

5. Every person committing either of the beforementioned offences after having been once convicted thereof as an idle and disorderly person—persons going about as gatherers of alms under any false pretence, or wilfully exposing to view in any street or public place any indecent exhibition, or wilfully and indecently exposing his or her person, or gaming or betting in any public place, or having in his or her possession implements of housebreaking or armed with any offensive weapon, or having on him or her any instrument to commit any felonious act—every suspected person or reputed thief frequenting any place of public resort with intent to commit felony, or who being apprehended as an idle or disorderly person, shall violently resist any peace officer so apprehending him or her,—shall on conviction thereof, be deemed a rogue and vagabond, whom it shall be lawful for the justice before whom taken to commit to gaol, there to be kept to hard labour, for any time not exceeding two years.

6. Any person who shall escape out of any place of legal confinement, before the expiration of the term for which he or she shall have been committed by virtue of this Act, or who shall come a second time under the operation of this Act as a rogue and vagabond, or who shall violently resist any peace officer apprehending him or her as a rogue and vagabond, after having been once convicted thereof,—shall be deemed an incorrigible rogue, whom it shall be lawful for any justice to commit to gaol, there to remain until the next Quarter Sessions of the peace, and there kept to hard labour during the period of his or her imprisonment.

7. Any person using profane, indecent, or obscene language in any public place, may be apprehended by any constable, and shall be liable to a penalty of £5: or to imprisonment for three months.

8. Any person may apprehend offenders under this Act; any peace officer neglecting to do so liable to punishment.

9. Justices on information to issue warrants for the apprehension of offenders and suspected persons.

10. All offenders against this Act to be searched,—trunks, bundles, &c., to be inspected; effects found on offenders to be sold.

11. Justices may bind persons by recognizances to prosecute as to incorrigible rogues, and such other offenders as may appeal, before the next Quarter Sessions.

12. Incorrigible rogues may by the Quarter Sessions be sentenced to punishment by imprisonment hard labour, and whipping.

13. Offenders sentenced to hard labour may be worked on the public roads.

14. Officers neglecting their duties, and persons obstructing them in the execution of their duties, on conviction thereof, to forfeit any sum not exceeding £5, or be imprisoned for any time not exceeding three months, or until such fine be paid.

15. Lodging houses, &c., suspected of concealing offenders against this Act may be searched, and suspected persons found therein may be apprehended.

16. Persons aggrieved may appeal to the next Quarter Sessions.

17. Proceedings not to be quashed for want of form; convictions to be filed as of record, certified copies thereof to be evidence, and returns thereof to be made, as in cases of other convictions.

18. Justices, &c., to have treble costs if judgment be in their favour.

19. Limitation of action within three months after the cause of action shall have arisen.

Fines, &c., imposed by this Act, one moiety to be paid to the Queen for the public uses of the colony, and the other moiety thereof to the informer.

We are requested by John G. Cohen to notify to buyers that his unreserved sale of Ironmongery, &c., will be continued this morning, at his Rooms, 490, George-street, at eleven o'clock precisely.—Communicated.

GENERAL REMARKS.

Tuesday 20.—Morning, calm and sultry, thin vapoury cirrus clouds. The sun attained great power toward midday, no wind, and thermometer between twelve o'clock and three ranged from 78° to 85°. After one o'clock, electric clouds gathered up from westward, which shortly enveloped the whole western sky, and continued hanging about until late in the evening, (and some large drops of rain fell at one time,) when passed off in part in the east, where occasional lightning. Light airs P.M., first from north-east then south-east for a while, then back to north, and freshened a little from that quarter about nine o'clock.

Wednesday 21.—South wind set in before daybreak, and blew moderately fresh through this day. Clouds collected around in large cumulous masses early, which between ten and eleven changed into the nimbus cloud, and gentle showers fell between eleven and twelve o'clock. Weather, P.M. became quite wintry and cold, clouds hung threateningly, but without rain.

Thursday 22.—Light cool breezes from southward and by east throughout; morning, overcast; middle part, sunny fine weather, clouds rising and passing off. Night, cloudy.

Friday 23.—Cool pleasant weather; wind from south and by east in gentle breezes A.M.; moderate, inclining to fresh P.M. Forepart, cloudy and very light droppings of rain, barely perceptible. Middle and latter parts, clear sky.

Saturday 24.—Morning, calm and without a cloud in the sky; middle and afternoon, moderate pleasant breezes from south-east, which sank to a perfect calm soon after sunset. Night, cloudy and heavy.

Sunday 25.—Morning, calm, or nearly so; cirrous clouds thinly covering thicky. Between ten and twelve, atmosphere close and sultry; after that, gentle breezes sprang up from north-east, northed, and freshened latter part, dark clouds passing from north-west-west, to south-east, with some gentle rains between three o'clock and six. Continued rather darkly clouded forepart night.

Monday 26.—Morning, light north wind, hazy and cloudy. Fore and middle parts, close and muggy dark hazy gloom and cirrus scud. Afternoon, wind freshened and got to blow very boisterously all latter part of the day, atmosphere growing disagreeably damp, and gloom encreasing; continued a strong north wind till near eight, then moderated for a time, veered a little west of north, and grew warm and relaxing, and atmosphere became muddy with scud, and broken cumulus flying over; wind rose again before nine to blow in heavy gusts from west of north. At 9·10 a very violent squall of hot wind, with heavy rain; continued to blow heavily, and encreased in temperature till past ten o'clock. Barometer and external thermometer ranged as follows:—At nine o'clock, 29·306 70°; at 9·30, 29·279 75°; at 10, 29·270 80°; at 10·30, 29·275 75°; at midnight, 29·281 72°; attached remaining stationary at 70. Barometer fell again latter part night to 29·170, where it stood with a concave top at five o'clock A.M. of 27th. Thermometer 65° inside, 60° outside, and at 5·15 a most furious squall with a current of large hard rain swept over from north-west and by west to south-east-east; this lasted about ten minutes, and western sky then rapidly cleared.

MULTUM IN PARVO.

(From late Australasian Papers.)

THE following gentlemen have signified their intention of applying for admission to practice in the Supreme Court of Port Phillip, as attorneys, solicitors, and proctors—John Matthew Smith, lately under articles of clerkship with Mr. Duerdin; Edward Messiter Dyne, late of Hobart Town, and J. Martyr, late of Geelong.—The Mayor of Melbourne had convened a meeting to be held on Monday last, for the purpose of considering what steps should be taken in consequence of the postponement of the separation of Port Phillip.—Mr. W. S. Chuncey had arrived at Adelaide, as engineer of a company which proposes to form a railway from the Burra Burra Mine to Port Adelaide.—The South Australian Company have 270 tenants; who have 14,077 acres of land actually in cultivation.—Messrs. Underwood and Eddie sold at the "Eagle's Return," (Van Diemen's Land) nearly 3000 sheep, at the following prices:—1400 ewes, in their wool, with 250 lambs given in, at 5s. 11d. per head; this was an indifferent lot; 469 ewes, in their wool, with about 60 per cent. of lambs given in, sold at 8s.; 253 maiden ewes, at 6s.; 190 wethers, at 7s. 7d.; 395 shorn wethers, in good condition, at 5s. 11d.—From some remarks made by Earl Grey to Mr. Jackson, as published in that gentleman's correspondence, it appears that convicts are to be sent to Western Australia, at the request of the colonists. That colony, after an establishment of twenty years under the free labour system, has totally failed, and the settlers think that as there are no buildings fitted for convicts, there will be a large Government outlay at the commencement of the convict system, and an increased military force, which will infuse new life into the colony.—His Honor the Superintendent of Port Phillip has appointed the following gentlemen to perform the duties required to be performed by the Mayor and Aldermen of Geelong respectively, until such officers have been elected under the provisions of the Act of Incorporation, viz.:—Mayor of the town, Foster Fyans, Esq.; Aldermen: 1. Villamanta—Edward Brown Addis, Esq.; 2. Belerine Ward—Jonathan Clarke, Esq.; 3. Kardinia Ward—Robert Culbertson Hope, Esq.; 4. Barwon Ward—Lesley Alexander Moody, Esq.—Proceedings have been taken by the Customs at Melbourne against the captain of the Reaper, for having fifty passengers on board, and no surgeon, for which he was fined £25, and £15 for not giving in a correct list of passengers on his arrival.—Smith O'Brien having refused to give his parol is under very strict discipline; he is not allowed to send or receive letters unless they have been read by an officer; he is not allowed to go more than two hundred yards from his house, and not to enter any house but his own, &c.—It is expected that the Prince's Bridge at Melbourne will be completed about the middle of next year.

AUSTRALIAN HORSES.—Under this head the Bengal Hurkaru gives some particulars of a fraudulent attempt to pass off inferior horses from Van Dieman's Land, under the pretence of their being horses of well known character in that colony. Although the Sydney people are no more answerable than the residents of Calcutta would be for any thing done in Hongkong, our India contemporary gives us the benefit of the transaction by citing not only the generic term "Australia," but also calling the horses "Walers," a name given to horses from this colony. Our contemporary says—"We have been watching attentively and very much to our amusement and edification, a controversy between two rival horse-dealers from Australia, who have, for these three weeks past, been waging war against each other in the columns of the Star. As the casus belli is one in which the public is not a little interested—namely, the authenticity of the pedigrees and descriptive rolls of the 'Walers' brought to Calcutta for sale; we have been intending for some time to lay the result of the contest before our readers as soon as one party should confess himself beaten, but the battle has lasted so long, that, until yesterday, we despaired of anything like a definite conclusion. Yesterday, however, one of the belligerents set fire to his magazine and exploded with considerable effect. Now is the time then to enlighten the public on the secrets of Australian horse-dealing, so far as they have been realised during the progress of this war." The correspondence is lengthy, but a short narrative will explain the whole affair. In a catalogue of horses which arrived at Calcutta, a horse named Jerry Sneak was described as "the winner of the Launceston St. Leger in 1845," while in the same catalogue a roan colt was described as the winner of the same race in the same year. An anonymous letter in the Star of the 9th July, points out this discrepancy and asks for an explanation. On the following day Mr. Fitzherbert Knight, M.R.C.S.L., who prepared the catalogue, says that the error is merely clerical "in the description of the roan colt—instead of the St. Leger of 45, it was the St. Leger of 44 that was won by this promising animal." This would appear satisfactory, but on the 11th the anonymous writer of the 9th says, "I was present at the meeting in 1844, and saw the Leger won by a bay colt called Egremont," and then proceeds to point out a few more of these astonishing clerical errors. He says, "No. 14, Cupid, is stated to be bred by Mr. Synnett, but unfortunately has Mr. Princep's brand upon him, with P on the off side. I have tried very hard to twist it into an S, but cannot succeed. Cupid is stated to be the winner of a race at Launceston, called the Merchants' Purse; but unfortunately for Cupid, I can positively assert that a plate of that description was never run for at Launceston; and the only Cupid that ever figured there upon four legs, was a bay pony, my own property, in 1846." He then makes a similar exposé regarding another horse, Shadow; in the description of which there seems to be several clerical errors, all as unaccountable as those pointed out above. Mr. Knight then declared that he would have no further correspondence with an anonymous scribbler, when a Mr. Turner, from Van Diemen's Land, who appears also to have some horses for sale, acknowledged himself to be the writer; upon which Mr. Knight wrote him a letter concluding thus:—"I feel, therefore, compelled, unhesitatingly to remark, that your conduct since my arrival here has been uncourteous and ungentlemanly in the extreme; for you have not hesitated at falsehoods of the grossest kind to satisfy a low, base, dishonourable, jealous, and vindictive feeling, both uncalled for and unexpected. Such conduct I can allow no longer to pass unnoticed, and I therefore request that you will afford me that satisfaction one gentleman has a right to demand from another when so grossly insulted. Captain Vought has called upon you as my friend, and with him I leave the customary arrangements." Mr. Turner, it would appear, did not think the questions of Cupid's identity, or whether a roan colt or a bay colt won the Launceston St. Leger, would be any nearer a satisfactory settlement if he shot Mr. Knight or Mr. Knight shot him, declined to meet Mr. Knight anywhere but on that modern battle-field, the newspaper; and accordingly sent the challenge to the newspapers for publication, "as a sequel to the publication of the correspondence respecting Australian horses." A day or two afterwards, Mr. Turner sent the editor a Launceston newspaper, showing that Mr. Synnett's horse Cupid won a match at Newtown (V.D.L.) six weeks after the Lord Auckland sailed. Practices of the kind thus exposed are disgraceful to all concerned, and calculated to be most injurious to all who send horses to India. We hope to hear that the horsebreeders of Van Diemen's Land have called upon the shippers of these horses to explain their share in the transaction.

CORONER'S INQUEST.—On Monday last, an inquest was held at the house of John Page, residing at Woolwich, in the district of Sydney, on view of the body of William Page, a boy of about seven years of age, then and there lying dead. It appeared that the parents of the deceased had had great difficulty in keeping him from a boat which was generally lying within a few yards of their house; that on Saturday afternoon, Mrs. Page missed and could not find her son, she called her husband, who went down to the water and found the dead body of the child floating a short distance from the shore. Dr. Tierney, from the evidence adduced, and the appearance of the body, was of opinion that death was caused by suffocation from drowning. Verdict, accidental drowning.

POLICE OFFICE.—This Court was opened yesterday, at nine o'clock, by the Mayor, who disposed of the charges on the drunkard list and departed; the Bench was subsequently taken by Alderman Allen and Mr. D. Allan, two of the justices on the roster for the day—the third, Alderman Broughton, was prevented by duty at the Supreme Court. Mr. Moir was occupied for several hours in the second court in the investigation of three cases remanded from a previous day—assisted partly by Alderman Egan and partly by the Superintendent of Police. The gentlemen summoned for bench duty to-day, are Mr. T. Barker, Mr. W. C. Botts, and Alderman Brown.

APPREHENSION OF COLLINS. — The man Collins, charged with a participation in the murder of the unfortunate Foley, at Pitt Water, two or three weeks ago, has been apprehended at Pambula, Twofold Bay, by two of the police stationed there, and forwarded on to Sydney, where he is now in safe custody.

IMMIGRANTS.—On Sunday no less than 201 immigrants arrived in Maitland per steamer, 195 of them being immigrants from the ship Una, and 6 from the ship Petrel. They comprised 36 married couples, 38 young men and youths over fourteen years, 32 young women and girls over fourteen years, 6 boys and 7 girls from ten to fourteen years, and 46 children under ten years (including 13 infants). In consequence of its being harvest time, these immigrants are being engaged very rapidly, and at higher rates than those by any previous ship. Nine married men, and nineteen young men, engaged as farm servants, one at £10 per year, two at £12, one at £14, two at £15, six at £16, one at £17, three at £18, one at £19, and three at £20, per year; one at 5s. per week, one at 8s., three at 10s. 6d., one at 12s., one at 16s., and one at 17s. 6d. per week; all being allowed rations: of these, however, several of the highest agreed only for a month's engagement, being for harvest work. Three married men and one young man engaged as general servants, one at £16, one at £18, and one at £20 per year, with rations or board and lodging, and one at 18s. per week without either. One married man and two young men engaged as domestic servants, one (a lad) at 4s. per week, one at £12 a year, and one at £13. One young man engaged as a butcher at 7s. per week. Eight young women engaged as house servants, at from £7 10s. to £13 per year. Ten married men, eight young men, and two young women, left the depôt on their own account, nearly all intending to go harvesting.—Maitland Mercury.

STOLEN PROPERTY.—About noon, on Friday last, Inspector Higgins, of the Sydney Police, in consequence of information received, proceeded to the residence of Eliza Murnane, near the Cattle Market, and on searching found a woman's night dress, a pocket handkerchief, and a set of gold studs, which were claimed by Mrs. Bower, of the South Head Road, as a portion of the property stolen from her house on the 17th instant. Having confined Mrs. Murnane, Mr. Higgins proceeded to the premises of a man named M'Caul, in Clarence-street, where Mrs. Bower at once identified a pair of blankets, a night dress, and a shawl, as another portion of the property stolen from her on the occasion referred to. Mary Ann Jane Pugh, living as housekeeper with M'Caul, claimed these latter as hers, alleging a purchase thereof from Murnane. M'Caul and Pugh having been taken into custody, Mr. Higgins again searched the premises of Murnane, where he found concealed in one place a pocket-handkerchief tied up, in which were three breast pins, a brooch, a watch key in gold, and a silver vinaigrette, which also were identified by Mrs. Bower as hers; in another a parcel of files and rasps of sizes; in another about a score of keys, most of which were skeleton, and a life-preserver. These prisoners were brought before Mr. Moir, on Saturday, to answer the charge of having in their possession property which they knew had been stolen, and were remanded from day to day until yesterday, when they were each committed to take their trial for the offence. Mr. Nichols appeared for the prisoner Pugh, and Mr Brenan for M'Caul; Murnane was undefended. Murnane having been removed from the dock, M'Caul and Pugh were called upon to answer for the possession of an Orleans dress and a silk cloak, the property of Mr. M'Cormack, of George-street, which, with a variety of other articles, had been stolen from his house between two or three months ago. His Worship did not consider the evidence to be such as would authorise a committal, and ordered the discharge of the prisoners accordingly.

RESCUE.—About ten o'clock on Friday last, constable Tighe, of the Sydney Police, apprehended a man named Davis, charged with the robbery at Mrs. Bower's, when he was set upon by a cabman named M'Quade, a man named Jenkins, and several other blackguards, who succeeded in rescuing Davis from Tighe's custody, after severely assaulting and beating him. Aided by a publican named Osborne, Tighe succeeded in retaining M'Quade, whom he placed in safe keeping; in about an hour afterwards, Tighe recognised and secured Jenkins. The charge came on for hearing on Saturday, before Mr. Moir and the Superintendent of Police, who remanded the prisoners for further evidence. Yesterday they were committed to take their trial. The man Davis, who was rescued from the police on this occasion, had been apprehended charged with the robbery at Mrs. Bowers, and has not since been retaken. The woman Murnane, who was committed for having some of the property in her possession, lived with Davis.

TO GROCERS, WINE MERCHANTS, AND OTHERS.—We are requested to remind intending buyers that the sale of starch, fruits, flour, &c., will be held at the rooms of Mr. George A. Lloyd this morning, at 11 o'clock. The wines, spirits, and ales will be sold precisely at 12 o'clock.—Communicated.

ORIGINAL CORRESPONDENCE.

To the Editors of the Sydney Morning Herald.

GENTLEMEN,—It may not be generally known, particularly among new-comers, that there is danger from sharks in bathing in this harbour. On Saturday last, a dog, swimming not a stone's throw from the easternmost part of the shore at Dawes' Battery, was disembowelled by a shark, and although he escaped from his gripe, he reached the shore only to die. I have been informed—though dead men are said to tell no tales—that the drowned, when recovered, are found to be greatly mutilated and disfigured. Sharks are frequently seen by boatmen.

AWFUL EXPLOSION AT ABERDARE.—SEVENTY LIVES LOST.—Merthyr Tydvil, August 12.—On Friday, a dreadful explosion of fire damp, that dread and destructive agent, occurred at Mr. William Thomas's colliery, situated about two miles from the college of Aberdare. The shock was felt for miles round. Soon after the fatal event, a most melancholy event took place—mothers hurrying in search of their sons, wives in search of their husbands, their cries rending the air as corpse after corpse, blackened and mutilated, was brought to sight; soon 60 disfigured corpses were brought from the pit, and then the brave men who had in such a praiseworthy manner rescued the few that escaped, gave over, though it was believed that there were a great many others down, living or dead. 125 men and boys were in the pit at the time of the explosion, very few of whom have been brought up alive. Seven horses also were killed. It is confidently asserted that the cause of this most awful catastrophe was the negligence of one of the colliers in going to a dangerous heading without a safety lamp. It is scarce three years since 28 human lives were destroyed by an explosion of the same nature, and near the same pit.

EFFECTS OF FEAR.—EXTRAORDINARY EXPERIMENT.—The great question whether cholera is infectious has been made the subject of two singular experiments in St. Petersburg, by order of the Czar. Four murderers, sentenced to death, were, without being told who were its previous occupants, put on a bed lately occupied by four cholera patients, who had died, and not one of them took the disease. It was then announced to the murderers that they were about being placed on beds in which four persons died of malignant cholera, and that if they escaped the disease, their lives would be spared. But, instead of cholera beds, the murderers were put into beds which had not been occupied by diseased persons at all, and yet, such was the effect of their fears, that all four died within three days!

MISCELLANEOUS EXTRACTS.

THE QUEEN IN IRELAND.

(From the Times, August 8.)

SATURDAY EVENING.—The absence of life in the streets of Cork early yesterday morning afforded an extraordinary contrast to the excitement and animated movements of the multitude which had crowded them on the preceding day, when the progress of their Sovereign gave the people an opportunity of exhibiting "that extreme desire towards loyalty and innate affection to the royal person" which many years ago an English attorney-general attributed to the Irish. The windows smeared with wax and tallow from the illuminations of the night before, the blasés decorations, the wreaths now withered and dead, the soiled calico festoons, and the smutched and scorched transparencies, suggested anything but pleasurable emotions. A gloomy, clouded sky contributed to this lugubrious effect, and the great framework of the triumphal arches, already stripped of their sere and yellow leaves by a few lazy looking carpenters, seemed like so many gigantic scaffolds just erected for the victims of a revolution. As my driver remarked, "the very sparrows look sorry now the Queen's gone."

At Cove, early as the hour was, the inhabitants were all up, gazing on the royal squadron. From the Admiral's house, perched on the side of the steep hill up which the streets of the town seem to cling in defiance of the laws of gravitation, signals were appearing and disappearing with great rapidity; rapacious boatmen were lying in wait round corners to seize on any unlucky officers whom the fascinations of the polka might have detained from his ship, or the still more unlucky stranger who wished to get out half a mile to a vessel at anything under a shilling a yard; and about the quays and landing-places were specimens of that mongrel race, between mendicant and labourer, which drifts to and fro amid every scene of attraction in Ireland, and begs and works in turn—the return of the latter being rather at long intervals, however, to a fair, a market, a monster meeting, a hurling match, a steeple-chase, or—now for the first time—to a royal progress. At the quays aforesaid, too, was no small bustle and confusion of voices; boats pushing off and landing, and always in each other's way; small officers sending their great bluff oarsmen and coxswains to all sorts of unpleasant places, because of their stupidity and awkwardness, and merchant seamen exercising the same privilege towards each other, and all that miscellaneous disturbance which goes on at every busy landing-place. Looking out towards the sea, the Royal squadron was visible busily engaged in preparing for a start. The morning was still cloudy; a heavy haze drifted along the tops of the undulating hills which surround the beautiful waters of Cove; the white jets of steam were whisked away by a raw easterly wind as they escaped from the funnels, mingled with the rolling masses of smoke; and the flags with which the ships in port were dressed streamed out steadily in what a seaman would call a "moderate" breeze, to the great surprise of any one unacquainted with the nautical idea of a "strong" one. The small fleet of boats and yachts which danced about the black hulls of the men-of-war careened over before it till their lugs dipped into the curling water as the waves went hissing over the gunwales. Indeed, it seemed evident the Royal squadron was to have a share of rough water. At 9 o'clock the Vivid was ordered outside to report on the state of the weather, and returned in about an hour with a favourable bulletin. In half an hour after the anchors were weighed, and the fleet began to move down the Channel towards the sea. Nothing could be more beautiful than their departure. As soon as the Victoria and Albert gave signs of motion, the heavy guns of the Citadel on Spike Island, answered by those of Carlisle Fort, commenced a Royal salute, which was taken up by the Ganges 74, and La Hogue steam guard-ship (whose 68 pounders spoke with stunning effect) Till the roar of artillery filled the air, and the dark rigging of the ships was wreathed with dense volumes of smoke, which obscured in turn squadron and shore as they swept away to leeward. The yards of the Ganges and La Hogue were manned in excellent style, and their crews saluted the Queen with three right Royal cheers as the yacht passed them. Nor were the officers on shore less zealous in showing Her Majesty due respect. The artillery and infantry were drawn up in fine order and precision on the ramparts of the Citadel and of Carlisle Fort, while the Commander at Fort Camden made up for the paucity of his men by the admirable taste with which he distributed them at long intervals along the slope of the hill on which the fort is placed. As her Majesty went by the red coats gave three cheers in their own style, and with a goodwill that made them tell on the ear like a trumpet. And now the little fleet was rapidly passing the succession of fine sweeping hills which embay the Channel, as it were into a series of bold lakes; and one by one the woody knolls and proud headlands, covered with some ancient castle or a crest of waving trees, were left behind, and the cheers of the spectators died away till the broad blue sea tumbled up into the opening arms of the land, and shooting past Trabolgan, the hospitable seat of Mr. E. B. Roche, embowered in a belt of fine foliage, they were fairly once more in the ocean.

Before we leave Cove we may mention that the first attention received by her Majesty in these waters was from a poor fisherman, who hailed the Royal yacht as she passed him, and pulling alongside with desperate eagerness, presented a fine fish—a salmon we believe—which he had just taken, to the Queen, as his tribute of homage.

The order in which, it was said, Lord Fitzclarence directed the squadron to sail was as follows:—The Royal yacht ahead; on the port quarter the Black Eagle, Master Commander Cook, Admiralty yacht; the Vivid, mail packet, Master Commander L. Smithett; Stromboli, Lord A. Beauclerk; and Lucifer, Lieutenant Lloyd. On the starboard quarter, the Fairy, Royal tender; Banshee, mail packet, Master Commander William Smithett; Sphynx, war steamer, Commander Hewlett; and Trident, Lieutenant Rick; and in the rear La Hogue, steam guard-ship, Captain Macdougall. But his Lordship is not more powerful than Canute. Britannia may, indeed, rule the sea, but she has not delegated her authority to any of her Post Captains. The only vessel which faithfully observed those orders was poor La Hogue, who kept so religiously astern that she was very soon out of sight. As the fleet hauled past Poor-head, the breeze increased, and with true easterly vehemence, tumbled up a small chop of a sea, which mauled the order of sailing very effectually. The course being east half south, or straight for Waterford, brought the wind nearly ahead. Down went the snow-white leg-of-mutton sails which had been sheeted so gracefully from the deck almost to the truck of each of the three wand-like masts of the little Fairy. Away astern went Stromboli, Lucifer, and Trident, mile after mile; the Sphynx working away manfully, but still not able to keep up with the rest of the squadron. And now the Victoria and Albert began to heave gently up and down on the steady swell or to dip her bow gracefully into a tiny wave. Anon comes one larger than the rest, and up flies a sheet of foam and spray before her figure-head and drifts back like drizzling rain on her forecastle. The little Fairy rolls her gilded sides about and ducks and dives like a water-snake, sometimes showing the screw astern, whisking the sea into froth, again showing her bow, with many a foot of copper visible, clean out of the sea, till she plunges it into the next surge up to the gunwale. The mail packets keep their stations admirably, and thus they proceed till noon, passing Ballycotton Island with a freshening breeze and rising swell, and drawing gradually away from the land. About half-past one o'clock the commander of the royal yacht got up a little race. The Victoria and Albert hoisted some mysterious little flags to her main, which, after fluttering for a little, were hauled down and replaced by others, and in a moment the Vivid and the Banshee put down their helms, and went about as fast as they could, till they had altered their course completely. In fact, they had been ordered to run to and speak the Sphynx, then right astern and almost hull down, to return and pass the Royal yacht, that they might ascertain their respective rates of speed. The little vessels absolutely flew over the water—no, not over exactly, for now and then, the Vivid especially, they sent their sharp bows right into a wave and were for a second lost in a hazy mist of spray. The race was most exciting; parallel to each other, and only about 300 yards apart, the rivals went plunging on through foam and wave to their common goal. The commanders, like the two sons of Tydeus, eager to excel, hurried about trumpet in hand, from deck to paddle box, noting every yaw of the steersmen with the closest scrutiny, and encouraging their engineers as the heroes of old were wont to exhort their charioteers. For miles they steamed on, and yet it would be impossible to say any alteration took place in their respective positions. By rapid degrees the Sphynx was neared, and the excitement was at its greatest. The Vivid, smaller than the Banshee, and much shorter, went round like a top, and passed up to the port-quarter of the man-of-war. The Banshee, describing a far wider circle, ranged up on her starboard quarter, and it then became evident that her rival had somewhat the best of the struggle, and would pass the Sphynx first. So indeed, it proved, and the race was to the Swift, for the Vivid on drawing a-head of the Sphynx was perhaps a few inches in advance of the Banshee, but continued in the race back to the Victoria and Albert, to increase her advantage till she was nearly a cable's length before her competitor. It was nearly two o'clock before they rounded the Sphynx, and just before three they came up with the Royal yacht. Here the Vivid would not be denied; making the most of her position, she dashed right before the Banshee so as to give her the full benefit of the wash of her wheels, and shot past like a race-horse. As the gallant little craft neared the Victoria and Albert, all the hands of the latter were piped on deck, and her officers cheered the victor lustily, while the Prince and the distinguished persons by whom he was surrounded seemed highly delighted with the contest. The Banshee went in advance of the yacht a few minutes afterwards, and then came another hour of uninterrupted progress, during which the wind and sea moderated. Youghal and Dungarvan—famous names in the annals of Parliamentary eloquence—were left behind in succession without recognition, although an unfortunate little steamer crowded with passengers, ran out from shore, and toiled in vain after the squadron for several miles with a perseverance worthy of more success, while it could not have a better cause. The headlands of Waterford were now approached and gradually drew into sight as the squadron ran up towards Dunmore. About half-past three o'clock a sail, which had been some time visible on our starboard bow, hove-to close abreast of the fleet, and proved to be the Sparrow ketch, Commander Frazer. Her beautiful white canvass and rounded sides, as with topsail aback she lay-to, and rose and fell with the waves, while the Fairy was running down towards her, provoked an unfavourable comparison with any of the steamers around her, staining the air with streams of dark smoke. Her commander having gone on board the tender to act as pilot up the harbour, the ketch filled her topsail again, and in a few moments was bowling away before the wind astern of the fleet. Tramore, which is to Waterford what Gaeta was to Rome in days gone by—litus amœnum jucundi recessus—now presented its smiling villas and clean rows of houses, drawn up above the pretty bay which bears the same name. Then Brownstone-head, a formidable looking bluff with the white surges flashing up its rugged sides, was left behind; the light-house of Dunmore appeared on the left, and rounding their course to the opposite side of the Channel, whereon stands the Hook light, the fleet passed up the broad estuary in which the Sun loses its waters, and at the head of which is situate the urbs intacta—Waterford. However they knew it, the people were prepared for the arrival of the squadron. The light houses on both sides of the Channel hoisted their flags, the Royal Standard floated proudly from Duncannon Fort, and the guns of the latter thundered forth a Royal salute, while the soldiers, joined by a number of persons who had assembled on the battlements, cheered a lusty welcome to their Queen.

Dividing the broad waters of the stream and gliding between the banks studded with mansions, embosomed with trees or rising into hills covered with heath, the squadron proceeded upwards till, at shortly after half-past 4 o'clock, they dropped anchor for the night between Passage and Ballyhack,—two small fishing stations, each with its usual ruin of a castle and a new chapel. Several boats put off from shore and hovered round the yacht, waving little flags and cheering occasionally. The colours were hoisted at the Coast-guard station, and the people of passage displayed such bits of bunting as they were in possession of.

At a quarter after 5 the Fairy, having, it was said, His Royal Highness Prince Albert on board, steamed up river to Waterford, which is about eight miles from the anchorage, and returned alongside the Royal yacht at 10 minutes to 8 o'clock, having just given time to any one on board to take a glimpse of the town so famous for butter and bacon and Young Irelandism. When night close in. Passage and Ballyhack illuminated—those poor small villages! Yes, indeed, not a window but exhibited its candle at every pane, while bonfires blazed on the quay and gleamed away up the dark sides of the distant hills. Every credit is due to those people for their respectful loyalty. For hours the population gathered around those great fires flickering about with the wind, and strangely suggestive of mystic rites and unhallowed creeds, of African fetishes, and of those sacrifices to Baal which antiquaries assign as their origin. There could be no mistake about the sincerity of their cheering or the power of their lungs, for the whole channel echoed for hours with the cries of joy with which they hailed the presence of their Queen; and it was not till past midnight that their manifestations of delight terminated and the flames were extinguished on the mountain sides.

CREDIT AT OXFORD.

(From the Times, August 7.)

A case that was tried some eighteen months back before Mr. Commissioner Phillips at the Insolvent Court may probably not yet have faded from public remembrance. A young man, the son of a country clergyman, during his stay at Oxford had very improvidently, not to say culpably, involved himself in debt with the University tradesmen to an amount far beyond his father's means of payment. It appeared in the course of the proceedings, that not only had credit been given to the insolvent to an unlimited extent, upon the mere strength of his being a gownsman, without any previous enquiry from the college tutors as to his means of payment, but the case was complicated with certain bill transactions of a nature very discreditable to all parties. The whole question of the University system of credit was raised in connexion with this case. We called public attention to the point at the time, and for some weeks the columns of the Times were filled with letters from the University tutors, University tradesmen, and parents of youths who had been involved at the University in liabilities, which either necessitated cruel sacrifices on the part of their families, or an application to the Insolvent Court.

In our columns of yesterday and to-day will be found the report of another such instance of culpable prodigality upon the part of a young Oxford under-graduate, and of still more culpable abuse of the credit system upon the part of Oxford tradesmen. As far as the insolvent is concerned, this is not so gross an instance of unprincipled prodigality as the one upon which we commented before—but yet quite bad enough. He came over from Australia in 1841, with a guardian, being then about sixteen years of age; and in 1843, at the age of eighteen, commenced residence, and a system of debt, at Exeter College, Oxford. His allowance from his father—£250 a year—was a sufficient one to have maintained him creditably in the position of a gentleman. The schedule, however, which he produced before the Chief Commissioner exhibited debts to the amount of £750, nearly the whole of which was due to Oxford tradesmen; and the debts had been contracted during a three years' residence at the University. It is fair to the young man to state that he was entitled to believe his father to be a man of a certain amount of property—of a considerable portion of which he has been recently deprived, in consequence of a recent decision of the Privy Council, with regard to the Bank of Australia. Be this, however, as it may, his conduct cannot escape the charge of culpability—it is only less culpable than that of the tradesmen who tempted a raw and foolish youth to take credit by every sort of temptation. "This is done," as Mr. Cooke well said in commenting upon the case, "in the hope and belief that those persons would pay the debt who never contracted it. It was not from the young man that payment was expected, but from his father, his mother, or some of his family, who would pay the debt, to save him from passing through the Insolvent Court. Thus, in this case, where the boy of eighteen was left to fight an unequal battle with an experienced tradesman, no restraint was placed upon the supply of goods, &c." The Oxford system, as expounded by one of the tradesmen, appears to be this: for two years credit is given—the goods being originally sold at high west-end prices—and after two years five per cent. interest is charged. In the shop of Mr. Randall, the principal and the detaining creditor, a notice is posted up to this effect, which must certainly have the effect of removing any latent scruple from the mind of a young man who is just about to take the fatal plunge into the abyss of debt. We will take Mr. Randall's own evidence as a key to the Oxford system:—

Mr. T. Randall, hatter and haberdasher, High-street, Oxford, stated that he was the detaining creditor of the insolvent, who from 1843 to 1846 had incurred a debt with him for goods and interest of 62*l*. 9s. 6d. Witness's charges were such as he was in the habit of making, and were precisely the same as would be made at the west end of the town. The supply of goods was such as an undergraduate in the insolvent's circumstance might fairly require.

To Mr. Cooke.—I have been in Oxford since my birth, and have kept a shop there twenty-five years, and have found it a good business, having had a large share of patronage. My plan is to charge equitable prices, according to the value of the articles and the risk I run. The reason why I charge 1*l*. 5s. for a velvet hat is, that I hold an agency from Lincoln and Co., of Sackville-street, and I agree with them to charge exactly the same price as they do, 23s. cash, and 25s. credit. Interest is charged upon goods after two years' credit. A notice to that effect appears on the heading of my bills, and is also written across my shop.

Mr. Cooke.—Is not that notice a great encouragement to credit?

Witness.—It is only a protection against fraud. The insolvent began to deal with me in 1843. I did not send in my bill that Christmas, but the next one, at the end of 1844. Insolvent did not pay, but still went on dealing, and the bill was doubtless sent in again at Christmas, 1845; and after the two years I charged five per cent interest. The witness then went on to state that he called upon the insolvent in prison, last Monday, and offered to discharge him if he would pledge his word to pay at any time that it was in his power to do so; and that the insolvent replied, he considered his imprisonment an equivalent for the debt.

The insolvent (to the Commissioner)—When I went to reside in Oxford, in October, 1843, I was about 19 years of age.

The Commissioner.—Then, Mr. Randall, just when he went up to reside, you began to give him credit?

Mr. Randall.—Yes, Sir.

Commissioner.—Did you make any inquiries about him?

Witness.—He was an independent member of the University, paying his own expenses, and not enjoying any exhibitions or benefits from his college.

Mr. Randall's evidence is too important to be half quoted, and we presently give the remainder of the examination. The system to which under graduates are exposed appears sufficiently from the portion we have already printed. It is summed up in two canons—"Articles supplied to boys to an unlimited extent at west-end prices." The prices of Messrs. Storr and Mortimer, and Howell and James, are the keystones of the system. "Credit at five per cent. on account until day of reckoning." The day of reckoning comes sooner or later according to the circumstances of the debtor. It is by no means necessary he should be the son of a wealthy family. Mr. Randall and his fellows are perfectly content with a mortgage on the income of the struggling law-student or the small benefice of the country clergyman. Sooner or later the day of payment comes, and their money is in the meanwhile bearing interest at the rate of five per cent. But we will proceed with Mr. Randall's evidence:—

Commissioner.—I see that he had hats, scarfs, and gloves with no inconsiderable rapidity. Did you at any time interpose any check to his proceedings?

Witness.—I delivered him his bill. I can't say that I pressed him for the money at the time, but allusion was frequently made by him to it, hoping that he would soon be able to bring me some money. I regarded him as a gentleman and a man of honour. He did not, at the time tell me the position of his father, nor had I any means of ascertaining; but it is possible I might have inquired among the insolvent's friends or of his tutor. I never inquired of the college tutor respecting the situation of the insolvent's father, as a matter of business. There is written across my shop—'A liberal discount for prompt payment, and five per cent. interest charged beyond two years' credit.'

Commissioner.—From your experience, do not you think the ordinary interpretation of those words would be, that any amount of credit might be had, on paying five per cent. interest?

Witness.—No, sir; a large proportion of the gentlemen who come to Oxford have their bills paid after they leave the University, instead of money passing through their hands, having only a certain sum allowed them for necessary purposes.

Commissioner.—When he first came to you, as a mere boy, and asked for things, you let him have them without inquiring anything about him?

Witness.—Yes; the general inquiry as to who and what a gentleman is goes through the college authorities, and I consider that when a gentleman has passed the ordeal, and become a member of the University, I have a right to hold him a gentleman and a man of honour. I never stopped any of the insolvent's orders. After the first year he got more sparing in his orders, and only had what was necessary.

Commissioner.—Then, without ascertaining who a young man is, or what his friends are, or for what purpose he is sent to the University, you suppose him to be a gentleman, and furnish him with whatever goods he may want?

Witness.—Not with whatever he asks, but with what may be necessary for a gentleman. I never expostulated with the insolvent, because he never had anything unnecessary.

It should be remembered that the delivery of the bill, of which Mr. Randall speaks as the check he interposed to the insolvent's proceedings, took place, for the first time, on the second Christmas after he commenced residence. Here is a tradesman, some fifty and odd years of age, who for a quarter of a century has been alluring youths into his books, upon the system he has himself described, and his reliance appears, after all, to be on the "honour" of his dupes. "I hold you, Sir, to be a gentleman, and a man of honour." That is Mr. Randall's allocution to his debtor, when the time has come for turning upon him, and pressing for what is called "immediate payment of the little account."

Cannot something be done to diminish the evil effects of this abominable system? It is disgraceful to English tradesmen that they should not shrink through a long course of years from building up their private fortunes on the blasted hopes and ruined prospects of a body of unfortunate and giddy headed boys. The case of Mr. ——— has been concluded by an equitable decision from the Chief Commissioner, to the effect that about the sum claimed should be paid into Court. But there will be plenty more such cases, and worse ones still, until the University system of credit shall be thoroughly reformed.

AFFRAY WITH THE MOPLAHS AT MALLIAPOORAM.

(From the Madras Spectator Extra, September 4.)

We regret to learn, that a sad affair has taken place on the Western Coast, between some Moplahs and a detachment of the 43rd N.I., in which Ensign Wyse of that corps lost his life. The particulars of the occurrence are as follows:—

On the 27th ultimo, thirty fanatics of the above caste, who had been committing murders and other enormities at Malliapooram, the scene of a former mishap of a similar nature, when part of the 5th N.I. came into contact with some of those desperadoes, who betook themselves to a strongly-built stone mosque, and bade defiance to the police. Upon this, the civil authorities called for the aid of the detachment of the 43rd at Malliapooram, under the command of Captain Watts, who accordingly sent out a party of sixty men, under Ensign Wyse, with the view of dislodging them; he himself following, with another party of equal strength. When the first of these detachments approached the mosque, 15 of the men within it issued forth; five being armed with knives fastened to either wrist five having spears, and five carrying matchlocks; and proceeded to march down the hill on which it is situated, for the purpose of meeting the advancing force. As they drew near, the sepoys fired ineffectually, without receiving orders, and then, shameful to relate, turned and fled, leaving Ensign Wyse, who had stepped out alone to meet the foremost Moplah, with only a Jemadar and a few faithful men—five, we believe, was their number—to encounter the fanatic band. The young officer cut down the man who first attacked him, but was wounded by a second, who in his turn succumbed to the bayonet of a sepoy. [It must be mentioned here, that there is some uncertainty as to the exact time of the sepoys' flight. One account makes them turn tail at this juncture only. The number of the Moplahs, however, gave them a fatal advantage, and poor Ensign Wyse and the six men with him were speedily put to death. Captain Watts did all in his power to rally the fugitives, but without success, and he was eventually compelled to retire to the Cutcherry, with the Assistant Collector, for the protection of the Treasury. Under these lamentable circumstances, it was thought advisable by the authorities to obtain the aid of European troops, and two hundred of H.M. 94th Regiment, commanded by Major Dennis, having with them two guns, were to start on the afternoon of the 30th ultimo, for Malliapooram. Seeing, however, that the march is one of ninety-six miles, we apprehend that four or five days would be spent on the road, and thus ample time would be afforded for the escape of the fanatics, if they were that way inclined, or for their reinforcement by numbers, if a struggle was determined on. It appears probable, that a body of native troops from Cannanore, could have been moved up more rapidly than the Europeans, but considering all the features of the case, the requisition for these latter was the more judicious step. We do not believe that the 12th would have emulated the cowardice displayed by the 43rd detachment, but as the Moplahs, who are a proverbially desperate race, may have taken it into their heads to show fight resolutely, and in considerable numbers, it is just as well that the men of the gallant 94th should be there, to meet any emergency.

As regards the disgraced portion of the 43rd, it is needless to say more about them now: their conduct will come under review, particularly when we hear further concerning it. What could have caused such a panic among them, at the sight of only fifteen men, of whom but one-third carried fire-arms, it is not easy to conjecture. Formidable though the Moplahs are, in the eyes of ordinary natives, we should have thought that the great numerical preponderance of the sepoys would have given them confidence and made them stand by their officers, who were so bravely leading them on.

When the disturbance above-mentioned has been quelled, and the authors of it punished, let us hope that Government will use precautions to ensure tranquillity for the future. Hitherto, they have lacked resolution to strike at the root of the evil by disarming the dangerous Moplahs, and repeated mishaps like the present, have denoted their folly. Frequent experiences, however, will surely open their eyes to the necessity for radical measures. So long as that fierce race are permitted to carry about weapons, there will be a perpetual tendency to events like the foregoing; the responsibility for which will rest on the head of the Executive, whose timorousness shrinks from depriving them of the power of mischief.

Subsequently Major Dennis annihilated this band of fanatics; he was unfortunately wounded in the attack.

(From the Madras Athenæum, September 20.)

The Commander-in-Chief has had much satisfaction in receiving the report made by Major Dennis of H.M. 94th Regiment, in command of a detachment composed of parties from that corps and from the 39th Regiment N.I., of the gallant conduct of the officers and men in their attack on a pagoda near Teermanum Coonettoo, occupied by a set of determined and desperate insurgent fanatics. On the approach of the troops, these madmen, armed with matchlocks, spears, swords, and war-knives, rushed out upon the detachment, and a sanguinary conflict ensued, terminating in the destruction of the entire Moplah band, 64 in number, with comparatively but few casualties on the part of the troops engaged.

The discipline, gallantry, and steadiness of every individual of the party, both European and Native, were most conspicuous; and Lieutenant-General Sir George Berkeley will have much pleasure in bringing their behaviour to the notice of the higher authorities. His Excellency requests that Major Dennis, the officers, non-commissioned officers, and men engaged on this occasion will accept his best thanks for this gallant conduct.

NEW ZEALAND LAND CONVEYANCES BILL.

House of Commons, July 12.

Mr. Aglionby moved the second reading of this bill.

Sir J. Graham should be glad to be informed as to the object of it.

Mr. Aglionby said that the bill was to enable the New Zealand Company to grant conveyances of the company's land, sold seven or eight years ago in New Zealand. The land sold amounted to three hundred thousand acres, to which no title had yet been given. The expense of making a conveyance in this country would be heavy; and it was proposed by the bill to enable the company to affix their seal to conveyances of land made in this country. The benefit to be derived from the measure would be confined entirely to those who had purchased land in New Zealand.

Sir James Graham: Had the bill received the sanction of the Government?

Mr. Aglionby replied that it had.

Sir J. Graham was anxious to know whether this arrangement would at all interfere with former enactments. Had the clause which relieved the company of the stamp duty received the sanction of the Government?

Mr. Aglionby replied that the bill had been submitted to, and had received the approval of the Colonial Office. A similar provision was inserted in the North Canadian Act.

Mr. Hayter observed that the proposal to allow deeds of conveyonce executed by the New Zealand Company in this country to be free of stamp duty had been assented to by the Treasury. The Canadian Act contained precisely the same clause, and it had been thought only fair to extend the same privilege to New Zealand.

Mr. Goulburn could not admit that the existence of a bad precedent was a reason for its continuance. He thought an exemption of this description to be objectionable on principle, and that it behoved the Chancellor of the Exchequer to consider the question in connexion with the revenue. (Hear, hear.)

Mr. Hayter said, that the clause was not inserted merely because there was a similar provision in the Canadian Act, but for other good reasons.

Mr. Gladstone asked whether this was the identical bill of which notice had been given by the hon. gentleman the Under Secretary for the Colonies.

Mr. Aglionby replied that it was.

Mr. Gladstone must then, of course, regard it as a Government bill. As the bill had only been circulated that morning, and as it was desirable that it should receive the consideration of the legal members of the house, he suggested the postponement of the second reading until Monday (hear).

After a few words from Mr. Mangles,

Mr. Goulburn observed, that conveyances, executed in this country, of lands in Jamaica, paid stamp duty, and he could see no reason for the present exemption.

Sir James Graham had not been aware of the Canada precedent, and felt surprise at the introduction of the clause. Considering that the bill had only been sent round that morning, he moved the postponement of the second reading until Monday.

After a few words from Mr. Aglionby,

Sir J. Graham reminded the honorable and learned gentleman that the subject of grants of land in New Zealand had given rise to much discussion in Parliament. He thought it desirable that the Colonial Office should be represented in the house on such an occasion, and as the honorable gentleman the Under-Secretary for the Colonies was not then in his place, he was certainly disposed to press his motion.

Mr. Mangles said that the colonists of New Zealand had been left seven or eight years without a title to their lands, and this measure was intended simply to assist them.

Mr. Roundell Palmer also urged the postponement of the second reading.

The second reading of the bill was then postponed till Monday.

We heard a story yesterday of a man who returned home from California with gold to the amount of 94,000 dollars, which he deposited in one of the mints. He took off his old tattered unmentionables, and was about to throw them away, but his wife, good prudent woman, took them, and with trifling effort she shook 23,000 dollars' worth of gold dust out of them.—Boston Chronotype.

THE BISHOP OF DOWN AND THE ORANGEMEN.

There being good grounds to apprehend that Orange processions may be renewed in some parts of Ulster on the approaching anniversary, the following admirable and well-timed address has been issued by the Bishop of Down and Connor and Dromore to the members of the Established Church in his own diocese, conjuring them to discountenance all such processions:—

"My dear Friends and Brethren in the Lord,—It cannot be deemed strange or unsuitable, that at a season when the excitement of party spirit too generally leads us to forget that Christian feeling of brotherly love which should at all times animate our breasts and influence our lives, I should address you, as your Bishop, in the earnest and affectionate language of admonition, warning, and advice, that you may 'increase and abound in love,' for 'ye yourselves are taught of God to love one another.' The language of the Apostle, recorded in that sacred volume which we all reverence and receive as our sure and only guide to eternal life, beautifully and impressively brings before our mind this wholesome truth—'I beseech you,' says he, 'that ye walk worthy of the vocation wherewith you are called, with all lowliness and meekness, with long-suffering, forbearing one another in love, endeavouring to keep the unity of the spirit in the bond of peace.'

"In a few days that period will arrive when it has been the custom of some of you to walk in procession, with party badges and music; innocent as such demonstrations may be in themselves, yet they cease to be so when they are looked upon by a large and influential portion of our fellow-citizens and neighbours as a triumph of party, calculated to renew old and bygone feuds, and to keep alive in our breasts anger, wrath, and malice, instead of love, joy, and peace towards those with whom we should live in mutual harmony and good-will; for, says Christ—'By this shall all men know that ye are my disciples, if ye have love one to another.'

"That such public exhibitions often degenerate into personal quarrels, lead to scenes of strife and bloodshed, and rekindle into a flame the dying embers of religious and political animosity—none of us can deny that the seeds of discord and hatred sown at these displays are a lasting evil, being in many cases perpetuated from father to son. Ask yourselves, my dear brethren, when the day is over and the hour of excitement passed, if, without a sting of conscience, you can kneel down, ere you take your rest, and, communing with your Heavenly Father, say 'Forgive me my trespasses, as I forgive them that trespass against me.' Nay, does not your prayer partake rather of the spirit of the Pharisees of old—'I thank Thee that I am not as other men are.'

"I forbear to urge my appeal on mere worldly grounds of expediency; I could, were I thus minded, bring clearly before you many strong and valid arguments to show the lasting injury which such manifestations of party inflict on a country's prosperity, by the disturbance of that peace, security, and confidence, which alone insure the employment of capital and the exercise of industry. But such topics, though of great moment, I abstain from—I speak as the minister of God, judge ye what I say; I address a family of professing believers, knit together in one communion and friendship with Jesus Christ. 'Be, then, kindly and affectionate one to another, with brotherly love.' 'If it be possible, as much as lieth in you, live peaceably with all men.' 'Be not overcome of evil, but overcome evil with good.'

"Let me, then, my Christian brethren, earnestly and anxiously beseech you to refrain on the approaching day from all processions and meetings, calculated, as they surely are, to engender strife, and to estrange those who should live in the exercise of the sacred duties of brotherly kindness one towards another—each conceding to the other that right and liberty of conscience which he justly claims for himself—'doing unto others as we would they should do unto us.' And may 'the spirit of wisdom and understanding' direct you in all things—'the spirit of counsel and might strengthen you'—'the spirit of knowledge and the fear of the Lord' enable you to 'put on charity, which is the bond of perfectness, and let the peace of God rule in your hearts.' 'But if ye have bitter envying and strife in your hearts, glory not, for where envying and strife is, there is confusion and every evil work; but the wisdom that is from above is first pure, then peaceable, gentle, and easy to be entreated, full of mercy and good fruits, without partiality and without hypocrisy, and the fruit of righteousness is sown in peace of them that make peace.' And may that God who is the author of peace and lover of concord, grant that my words of pastoral admonition be, through His grace, grafted inwardly in your hearts; that refraining from all cause and incentive to party discord, you may make manifest to all that you have learned to 'abstain from all appearance of evil,' being taught, in words of heavenly wisdom, that 'Blessed are the peacemakers, for they shall be called the children of God.'

"Giving, then, dearly beloved, 'all diligence, add to your faith virtue—and to virtue knowledge—and to knowledge temperance—and to temperance patience—and to patience godliness—and to godliness brotherly kindness—and to brotherly kindness charity—for if these things are in you and abound, they make you that ye shall neither be barren or unfruitful in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ.'

"And now, brethren, I commend you to God, and to the heart of His grace, which is able to build you up, and to give an inheritance among all them which are sanctified.

"Be perfect—be of good comfort—be of one mind—live in peace—and the God of love and peace shall be with you. Grace be with you all—Amen.

Cholera.—On the cholera breaking out in London, the Marquis of Normanby applied to the French Minister of Agriculture and Commerce for some information as to what was done by the French Government when the malady broke out in Paris. The Minister immediately referred the question to the Board of Public Health at Paris, who are now drawing up a report on the subject, which will be transmitted as soon as possible to the English Government. In the mean time, as the cholera appears to be spreading, the celebrated Dr. Majendie, the President of the Committee, is to go to London on a special mission from the French Government, for the purpose of communicating verbally to the London faculty the result of his experience, and of the profession generally, during the recent prevalence of the disease in Paris. Dr. Majendie leaves Paris for England this evening.—Paris Correspondence of the Morning Herald dated 15th July.

The colonial dinner at Greenwich ought to produce richer and riper fruits than the dessert and the speeches. It was remarkable for its occasion and composition. General dissatisfaction in the colonies, nothing done for their contentment either in Downing-street or Parliament, the session closing without a prospect of improvement even next session,—these are the circumstances under which many intelligent men of all parties escape from the cross purposes and petty entanglements of House and Club to compare notes and resources, and see what can be done for the colonies. No attack was made on any person, not even on Lord Grey; but the very gathering was based on a sense of hopeless mistrust in the present conduct of the colonial administration. That the dissatisfaction extends to every section of politicians, is proved by the concurrence of men representing every section,—of Lord Monteagle, who represents the older Whigs; of Lord Lyttelton, the Liberal Conservatives; Sir William Molesworth, the Radicals; Mr. Cobden, the Manchester school; Mr. Stafford, the Protectionist Tories; Mr. Monsell, the intelligent Anglo-Irish; an O'Connell, the Celtic Irish; Mr. Francis Baring, the great commercial interests; and Mr. Aglionby, even the Hawes interest. The colonies had their representatives; also the theoretical colonisationists, and the emigrationists. As to the extent of the views propounded, it may be learned from Lord Lyttelton; who confessed the utter incompetency of the Colonial Office, and stood up for local self-government. Lord Lyttelton is a conscientious man, young, able, plain spoken, and much respected! He was Under Secretary for the Colonies when Mr. Gladstone was Secretary. This is a formidable band, the probable nucleus of a more extensive league, for overawing the fainéants of Parliament or the Office.—Spectator, July 21.

"More Pork."—Among the commonest birds which frequent the forests is a small owl, generally known to the settlers and soldiers by the denomination of "more pork," from a habit it has of pertinaciously and distinctly reiterating this phrase for about half an hour before daylight. This bird gave rise to rather an amusing incident in the Hutt Valley during the time of the fighting with Mamaku and Rangihaeta, and when, in anticipation of a morning attack, a strong piquet was turned out regularly about an hour before daylight. On one occasion the men had been standing silently under arms for some time, and shivering in the cold morning air, when they were started by a solemn request for more pork. The officer in command of the piquet, who had only very recently arrived in the country, ordered no talking in the ranks, which was immediately replied to by another demand, distinctly enunciated, for "more pork." So malapropos a remark produced a titter along the ranks, which roused the irate officer to the necessity of having his commands obeyed, and he accordingly threatened to put the next person under arrest who dared make any allusion to the unclean beast. As if in defiance of the threat, and in contempt of the constituted authorities, "more pork" was distinctly demanded in two places at once, and was seconded by an irresistible giggle from one end of the line to the other. There was no putting up with such a breach of discipline as this, and the officer, in a fury of indignation, went along the line in search of the mutinous offender, when suddenly a small chorus of "more pork" was heard on all sides, and it was explained who the real culprits were.—Power's Sketches of New Zealand.

The Arsenic Controversy.—At an inquest in Westbury, last week, on the bodies of two infants who seem to have been poisoned with arsenic, five and eight years ago, Mr. Herapath called in question a recent doctrine as to the natural existence of arsenic in human remains:—"Ridiculous notions have gone abroad, owing to some sayings which have been attributed to the French chemists. Raspail, for instance, is reported to have said that he could produce arsenic from the legs of chairs, and Orfila that he could do so from the common soil. I have made experiments on hundreds of bodies of human beings and brutes, but have never discovered arsenic unless it had been administered medicinally or for a criminal purpose. I have also made many experiments on soils, and I believe the statement of Orfila to be a mistaken one."
